

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 24, 1906.

HAVEN'T SAID MUCH ABOUT SHIRTS LATELY

But it isn't because the shirts don't deserve it. The other day I got in a new lot, up-to-date and stylish in make and color, blues, greens, heliotropes (very fetching with gray clothes) and a white with black polka dot which is a beauty. Pleated bosom negligee shirts with cuffs attached or detached. You'll find your fancy pleased here and at a price that will surprise you. $1.25 to $1.50 takes most any of them.

C. W. HIGGINS, M. D.

In making this review of the community, industries and professions of Salt Lake, The Telegram laid too much stress on the medical men of this city and particularly to such a useful man as the one whose name is the caption of this brief sketch. Dr. W. Higgins is widely and favorably known throughout Utah and the States as a noted medical specialist, and has demonstrated time and again his eminent professional skill in the cure of many serious diseases, and who is very highly regarded by many former and present patients. He is not a new-comer to Salt Lake City, but has an established record of thirty-two years to his credit, and during all these years thousands of patients have been positively cured and are now enjoying good health. His offices are at the corner of Main and Third South streets, St. Elmo hotel. Dr. Higgins is thoroughly responsible and reliable, and will not undertake a case unless he is absolutely sure that he can effect a cure, and his word is good in each and every case.

ACCOUNTANT WINS.

Captures Tidal Stakes Over Keene's Bohemia at Sheephead Bay.

NEW YORK, June 23.—In a heavy rainstorm which began just before the horses went to the post for the fourth race, James A. Brady's Accountant, for which he paid $45,000, won the $20,000 tidal stakes, one mile and a quarter, at Sheephead Bay today. James R. Keene's Bohemia, quoted at even money for the place, was second, and the Newcastle stables Bull's Eye was third. The race was run in 2:10. The Brady entries, Accountant and Holscher, were always an odds favorite at 7 to 10, with the Keene entries, Bohemia and Kuroki, second choice at 4 to 1. Off to a good start, Martin sent Accountant into the lead, followed by Bohemia and Pegasus. Three furlongs from the finish, Bohemia challenged the leader, but the favorite had enough left and won handily by one and a half lengths. Results:

SAMUELSON HAS FANS GUESSING

People Are Anxious to See How He Shows Up Against McFarland.

LAWSON AND KRAMER WILL SOON MEET AGAIN

Iver and New Yorker Will Fight for World's Championship at Saucer.

All sorts of opinions are being expressed as to the outcome of the match race between Samuelson and McFarland, which will be run at the saucer next Tuesday evening. After the poor showing made by Samuelson in the final event last Friday evening, many are coming to the opinion that the Provo boy is not the rider he was last year—that he has reached his summit and is now on the decline.
Whether this is true or not it certainly is a fact that Samuelson is not riding in near his old form this year. True he is in with faster company and up against speedier and headier riders, but even this fact does not explain away his recent performances. In other years Samuelson has been up against both McFarland and Lawson. He has scored an occasional victory over them and though these have been the exception rather than the rule, Samuelson was always able to follow their pace if not speedily enough to circle them on the sprint. But last Friday evening, after having been paced by Lawson and McFarland for the better part of two miles, he was absolutely unable to follow them during the last two laps. What reason can be given, except that the Provo boy didn't have the speed?
Public Interested in Race.
And yet in spite of this fact, people are intensely interested in the coming match race. Is it because they expect Samuelson to win? No. If Samuelson wins, his victory will be the greatest sensation in the annals of the historic saucer track. And this is true in spite of the fact that Samuelson once scored a victory over McFarland. Why, then, this interest? Is it not that the cycling public is anxious to know just how well Samuelson can do in a match race, that they are anxious to see how he measures up with a man that he once defeated and that they want to test themselves as to whether or not the Provo boy is really a back number?
The opportunity of Sam's life to demonstrate to his friends that he is still in the racing game will be his next Tuesday night. The programme Tuesday evening follows:
Five-mile match race—McFarland vs. Samuelson.
One-half mile open, professional.
Three-quarter mile handicap, professional.
One-mile open, amateur.
Lawson Is No Kicker.
If Iver Lawson is a great bicycle rider he is no less a true sportsman. Once when racing Kramer in New York for the championship, Kramer's tie punctured on the final sprint and won the race. The purse was his, the race was his and, according to the rules he had a legitimate right to claim both. But he refused. As soon as Lawson dismounted and poked his thumb into Kramer's soft tire, he proposed that the race be run over. And it was, and Lawson won again.
Last Friday evening another little incident occurred which goes to show that Lawson is a game fellow. In the final of the quarter-mile open, professional, the riders were closely bunched right at the start. There was a general crowding down for the pole and although Lawson was not crowded right off the track, he perhaps deemed it best to take to the tail again and did a quarter-mile in a short race, and victory half depends on the start.
Before Lawson could recover himself the other riders were so far away that according to the rules, which regard only the act without going into the motive, he had grounds for a good, strong protest. This action on the part of Lawson, after he had broken the world's record in his qualifying heat, stamped him a champion of both of bike riders and game sports.
Kramer Coming to Salt Lake.
One more month and the Salt Lake people, and those of the surrounding cities, will be treated to the greatest bicycle event ever promoted in cycling annals. This forthcoming event is nothing more or less than a match race between Iver Lawson and Frank Kramer, the two recognized world's champions, the race to decide the championship of the world. Kramer is defeating everything in Europe and has defeated every man in the East. Lawson, on the other hand, has defeated all the Western champions and when these two great riders meet there will be something doing. Kramer will sail for America July 4. After a short stay in New York he will come to Salt Lake.
Hollister, the plucky little professional, who unfortunately had his collarbone broken in a spill a couple of weeks ago, will be able to ride within a fortnight. His collarbone has been properly set and has entirely healed up. For the next few days, however, he will have to be cautious, as a slight strain may cause a new break.

Baseball at Murray.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the Vincent-Nott ball-tossers and the Murray gang will line-up on the Smelter City grounds for an interesting game of baseball. Both teams have been very successful so far this season and will consider it in keeping with their past records to win today's game.
